Eat Local on a Budget Part 6 – Buy Meat Direct from the Farm

By Leah Bouchard

“Fall is an excellent time of year to fill your freezer with local meat direct from the farm. Free range chickens or even pastured pork may be available at this time of year. Also, when cattle and sheep come off the pasture in fall, they possess all the wonderful benefits and nutrients of being grass-fed. Additionally, small farmers often sell their animals before freezing temperatures set in, as feeding and watering becomes much more complicated in the winter.

If you have never purchased meat direct from a farm, here's what you need to know...”

COMMUNITY SEED LIBRARY

ARTISAN HALL

at Reimer Concrete and Building Supplies
in Roseau River

Drop by anytime during store hours.

Community Seed Library

“While you're bringing in the garden and preserving your bounty, remember to save some extra seeds to share! Sharing seed is a fun way to increase local food security, preserve heirloom varieties and meet other community members who share a mutual interest in growing food.

The seed library operates the same way as our Little Free Libraries, on a take some, leave some principle.

The seed library will be up until the end of October and reappear in January. (Any contributions made now will remain in the library until then.) So spread the word! The more participation we have, the more interesting and fun it will be!”
